CO. C. TRANSFERRED TO NEW BATTALION; IS NOW COMPANY D

Co. C, 331st Machine Gun Battalion, composed of young men from Janesville and Beloit, will hereafter be known as Co. D, 333rd Machine Gun Battalion. The order transferring the company came as a complete surprise not only to the men but to the officers. Owing to the fact that the 331st Machine Gun Battalion is a divisional organization it is composed of only two companies, and Co. C was the company chosen to go to the 333rd Machine Gun Battalion.

An order transferring the company came Wednesday, and on Thursday evening the men of Co. C were quartered and at home in their new battalion. This alone shows that the men of the company are well trained and are ready at any time to leave when the order comes. Maj. A. F. Dannemiller, commanding the 331st Machine Gun Battalion, arranged a very impressive ceremony and a short talk told the men of the fine record they had made, and assured them that although it was for the best of the service he hated to see them go.

On entering their new organization the men were given a hearty welcome and made to feel at home. At the present time a person would never know but what they had been members of the 333rd Machine Gun Battalion since its organization. Co. C is one of the best known companies in the camp and is composed of one of the finest drilled companies in the 88th division.

First Lieut. Joseph A. Barton, who is commanding the company during the absence of Captain Lancel R. Foote, is very proud of his men, and the men are equally proud of their officers, and although they were moved in the middle of their training period they are out to show the folks that they are real soldiers and that Maj. McClanahan of the 333rd Machine Gun Battalion will be just as proud of them as Maj. A. F. Dannemiller of the 331st Machine Gun Battalion was; and they are going to work hard to have the finest company in the best battalion in the 88th division.

On Monday evening the men of the three original companies of the 333rd Machine Gun Battalion serenaded the men of Co. D and gave them a royal reception in the battalion. Several short speeches were made and the keynote of all was to make the 333rd Machine Gun Battalion one of the finest battalions in the United States army.

Two impressive ceremonies took place last week. The first was the transferring of the company to another battalion and the other was the shaving of Supply Sergeant Raymond Gallaher's mustache. Raymond was a comical figure growing the mustache, and although he hated to part with it, Sergeant Smith finally prevailed upon him to have it taken off.

Sergeant Howard L. Smith of Janesville is making just as big a showing in the new battalion as he did in the 331st, and already several men of the other companies are asking where he got such a supply sergeant. How and is one of the hardest workers in the company and a man who gained his present position through hard work only.

Look at James Collins of Beloit, who was in the hospital for several weeks. He is much thinner than when he left and the men will not have a chance to add him until after he has been in the kitchen for a few days.

First Lieut. Louis A. Humason of Chicago, one of the best liked men in the entire company, was the only officer who did not come with the company. He was assigned to Co. A of the 331st.

Miss Sergeant John Henrikson of Janesville is making quite a name for himself as a singer. John will soon have to ask for a raise in salary to keep in money to purchase music.

Private Clyde Neils of Beloit has been detailed on special duty in the kitchen. Clyde is learning very rapidly to become a first-class cook. It won't be long before he can boil water without burning.

Sergeant Paul Scottford of Janesville has evidently lost his interest in five hundred, as he hasn't been found playing the game in the mess halls in several days.

Corporal Paul Kvale of Orfordville was on the program the other evening to sing at the Y. M. C. A. Kvale has made quite a name for himself as a singer and he is very much in demand.

First Class Private James Quinn of Janesville, accompanied by Private Dan McGrane, paid a special visit to the city on Sunday evening. They took in a show, had a bite to eat and then returned to camp. Then Dan was heard to remark, "What a wonderful night!"

Sergeant David Cunningham of Janesville seems to have regained his lost smile. He is full of pep and all the men are glad to see Dave himself again.

EXPECTED FACTS.
On Friday evening of this week the adherents of the policy that a return to the aldermanic form of city government would be most advisable have announced that they will hold a mass meeting at the Myers theatre at which they will discuss the merits of the proposed change. It is well known that the adherents of the proposed change have given no open statement of why the voters should support their cause. The Gazette, while believing in the present system of government as the best fitted, is not so hide-bound that it does not realize the fact that the majority rules and even a minority has a right to a hearing. However, it does not swallow whole unsubstantiated charges and believes the present system is "not guilty" and not a "Scotch verdict" either.

The public expects facts Friday evening and doubtless they will obtain them from the source that has hitherto been silent in public print. Although the invitation for the mass meeting was issued Friday evening, held under the auspices of the committee of a hundred, contained an urgent request that those opposed to the present system be present to explain their view, no one appeared, consequently there was but one argument presented.

Doubtless after Friday's gathering the public will fully understand just who started this movement, why it was started, and who will be benefited materially—individuals or the public. Whether the debate will be open or just one side presented remains to be seen. On questions of this kind one would expect an open debate, but doubtless this will not be permitted if the present policy is pursued by the campaign managers of the aldermanic form of government. Meanwhile the public await the disclosures that are to be made with interest.

SAVE THE AUDITORIUM.
There is any way possible to save the old and the new theatre, the auditorium, for future public use, it should be done. The men who subscribed stock for the purchase of the structure several years ago, did not expect a financial benefit, as several stated they donated their money, but the fact it has not paid for its own upkeep has led to the decision to sell it. On January 29th, a majority of the stockholders of the Auditorium company, represented for the majority part by proxies, decided to sell the building at public auction March 15th. There is a mortgage against the property, a ruling of the state industrial commission that certain repairs must be made before it can be rented for public use, and doubtless the stockholders figured that they no longer desired to put good money after bad and shift the responsibility upon other shoulders. However, the auditorium should be saved for public use, if possible. There are enough public-spirited citizens who would come to the rescue of the project if some arrangement might be made.

It has been suggested that the building be rented to the local military company. The state pays five hundred dollars of the armory rental and the other five hundred, with sums needed for improvements, could be raised with but little trouble if the question was put fairly and squarely before the people. It might be possible that the city could appropriate the five hundred dollars towards rental, making the sum derived a thousand yearly, if they saw fit.

In Green Bay the citizens raised twenty-five hundred dollars in fourteen hours for their newly organized state guard company, simply to equip them and give them a company fund. In Racine over thirty-five hundred dollars was raised, but by the city and part by the business men, to supply the two local companies of state guard there. Thus far the local company have not asked a cent from the business men for their support. If the five hundred dollars for rental was given, if the repairs were made, it would not be a request from the company, but from the public with whom the company would be glad to co-operate.

The use of the auditorium should be assured to the public. There is no place where sales of blooded stock, or swine, or mid-winter fairs, for which in these past Janesville was famous for country shows, where basketball games can be held and winter indoor sports enjoyed as in this structure. It is worth a bit of a personal sacrifice, as a war measure, if you wish to put it in such a light, to add to the contributions already made and retain it for public use.

It could easily be converted into a first-class armory, with the sanitary changes demanded, a few interior alterations and improvements, and it would be a valuable adjunct to the city. Both state and government property would be stored there. It would be a place where passing contingents of troops could be accommodated, where various public gatherings could be held, and in fact it is essential to the general interest of the community it be retained. It should be up to some civic organization to investigate the matter and take immediate steps to do what is necessary to keep it open for use of the public.

ALL RUSSIA.
Russia is like the Gaul described by Caesar as divided into three parts, only the trouble existing in Russia is that it has a different element fighting in these three parts. The great Russian empire is no more. The land of Peter the Great, of Catherine, of all the former Romanoffs is no more. Instead we find a nation steeped in Hun treachery, with hired traitors of Germany in command, who are delivering to their Master, for consideration, the great Russian empire of but a few months ago. The United States has always had a kindly feeling for Russia for the stand it took during the Civil war. It has sympathized with its people and their struggle for liberty, and now that the Huns have gained control of the country, its pity goes out even further for the poor, misguided people who are subject to the bitter tyranny of the invader and the traitor at home. Their lot is a sorry one, but the world need not be surprised if Japan steps in and helps straighten out the tangle. With a million and a half men in Manchuria it is a short ride across the Siberian railroad to the German frontier, and then look out.

William Kennedy's son, who is with a regular artillery contingent now in France, writes his father that the bundle of Gazettes received at the time of his letter were the first American papers in camp since they sailed from New York. He added that everyone in the command read every line of his letter with the exception of "home news," for home to those boys means anywhere in the "good old U. S. A."

Secretary Baker gives us the assurance that the spring drive on the "West Front" is soon to start and that "we" are ready for it. The good for not half enough men are on that firing line "three thousand miles away." We need a half million more before we are really prepared to repel the attacks that will come.

Day by day our boys are leaving us, and yet we do not realize we are at war. We observe endless days, the endless days, the pointless days, and subscribe to everything from up to and yet wonder why certain citizens are not interred for their anti-American talk.

No time like the present for the spring blossoms of political aspirations to start budding and be nipped by the late frost. Directly this question of whether we retain the commission form of government or not watch that bunch of aspirants for the office of mayor step forward. May the best man win.

No lack of patriotism up at Madison, according to the resolutions introduced. Both the senate and the house are filled with burning patriots, but just the same there are enough of the singed cats left to block any real movement toward eliminating the talk of anti-administration so prevalent in the east.

If the present extra session of the legislature does not give the governor the right to appoint a successor to the late Paul Huston in the United States senate, they will be derelict in their duties as American citizens.

Evidently Mayor Adams and the Beloit Daily News are at odds. The same might be said of Assemblyman Rosa and the News. The News has the sympathy of every loyal citizen in its fight, if that counts for anything.

Rock county will soon be well represented "over there" as every transport that sails with troops have some individual or a contingent of Rock county soldiers on board. They are in all branches of the service.

This war garden idea can not be started too soon. The first thing you know it will be planting time and then the rush for seeds and garden plots. (Care should be taken, however, not to allow plots of land donated to individuals who have sufficient land of their own if they cared to use it. It may be zero now, but next summer you will understand why it was so cold now and not blame it upon the frost in the banana belt.)

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

ROY K. MOULTON

INDUBITABLY.

Oh, the winsome suffragette. She is going to get us yet in her fight to gain her freedom. She is hitting quite a stride in her battle.

Shouting the battle cry of shedon. "Now," commanded the captain of the company, "now, Corporal Binks, charge up that hill."

"Sure," replied Corporal Binks, "I'm used to charging up things. I worked in a grocery store some nine years back home."

There are a good many wives who would like to sue for a separate peace.

So long as Germany keeps on wanting one kind of peace and her ally, another kind of peace, the entente cordiale (Teutonic) is going to continue to be more or less diluted.

"On account of the war" is the grand old alibi for the gay young Lotharios these days.

A stack of wheat at a restaurant and a movie is about the limit.

They are telling of a man who went into a restaurant downtown the other day and ate some horse steak and immediately passed away.

Which is another way of "being nagged to death."

"But for the study of sciences," said a learned professor, "we wouldn't know that the earth is round," which leads our good friend, Col. Walter Juan Davis, to remark: "The professor is wrong. No study is necessary. If you doubt that the earth is round, just try to outguess some night, after banqueting freely."

USING A SUPERFLUOUS WORD.
Headline in one of the morning papers: "FIRE OF SUSPICIOUS ORIGIN NEAR COMMISSARY STORES."

S. shipping board, enroll men needed so badly to complete the ships to rush supplies to our boys in France and our allies who are fighting so desperately in our cause for the democratization of the world.

WAS OFFICER ON LOST TRANSPORT

A friend writes in from Connecticut to the effect that he bought a state automobile license for 1918 this month and they threw in a tin Henry to fasten it on.

Some people just seem to be gifted in getting things that way. They say wild game is dying out rapidly in this country.

Yes, indeed. Look what happened to the Bull Moose.

THE SORRY HOSTESS.

She said she was sorry the weather was bad.
The night that she asked us to dine,
And she really appeared inexpressibly sad.
Because she had hoped 'twould be fine.

She was sorry to hear that my wife had a cold,
And she almost shed tears over that.
And how sorry she was, she most feelingly told.
That the steam wasn't on in the flat.

She was sorry she hadn't asked others to come.
She might just as well have had eight.
She said she was downcast and terribly grim.
Because her dear husband was late.

She apologized then for the home she was in.
For the state of the rugs and the chairs.
For the children who made such a horrible din.
And then for the squeak in the stairs.

When the dinner began she apologized twice.
For the olives because they were small.
She was certain the celery too wasn't nice.
And the soup didn't suit her at all.

She was sorry she couldn't get whitefish instead.
Of trout that the fishmonger sent.
But she hoped that we'd manage somehow to be fed.
Though her dinner was not what she meant.

She spoke her regrets for the salad, and then Explained she was really much hurt.
And begged both our pardons again and again.
For serving a skimpy dessert.

She was sorry for this and sorry for that.
Though there really was nothing to blame.
But I thought to myself as I put on my hat,
Perhaps she is sorry we came.

Second hand gloves are in great demand just now. If you have one to sell, get rid of it through a classified ad.

SHE'S A GYPSY AT CAPITAL FUNCTION

Miss Elizabeth Walker.

One of the most attractive masqueraders at a recent patriotic function at Washington was Miss Elizabeth Walker, a popular society lady who appeared in the costume of a gypsy. The dance was made unique by the fact that every girl invited two escorts and at least one of them was in uniform. This was one of the few prominent affairs of the younger set as their social season has been unusually quiet.

BOARD IN SESSION

FOR SIXTEEN HOURS

Approximately Three Hundred Registrants Examined by Medical Advisory Board at Postoffice

Yesterday.

All former records for long sessions of the medical advisory board were surpassed yesterday when the board was busy for sixteen hours.

Work was begun at eight in the morning and continued steadily until midnight. Registrants from three and one-half counties were examined, the number being close to three hundred.

Although the physical examination of the local exemption board put the final quota of class one men in this district through the tests today. While waiting for their turns to be examined, this morning, the men were brought up by a quartet composed of Hammelund, Fuzell, Weber and Kuhlow, which rendered several popular selections.

With the completion of examinations by the local board today, the bulk of the work has been finished, practically the only work remaining now being the disposal of the doubtful cases which have been examined by the medical board.

Although the records are not complete as yet, it is expected that the number of men qualified for general military service and ready to go on short notice to Camp Grant, will be close to four hundred. Exclusive of the men examined today, three hundred and fifty-two men are ready, having passed the tests.

CITY SCHOOLS WILL

NOT CLOSE TOMORROW

Public Schools Will Hold Regular Sessions Tomorrow, Washington's

Birthday.—Usually Observed as Holiday.

Because of the two weeks of school that were lost when the shortage of fuel necessitated their closing, it has been decided by Superintendent Faust to hold the regular sessions tomorrow,

Washington's birthday. In former years the public schools have always observed this day as a holiday, but it has been deemed wise to make up some of the time lost in this way.

The plan of abolishing the annual spring vacation this year is being considered, but as yet nothing definite has been decided. It may be possible that the students will be allowed a vacation of one or two days at that time, but it is thought that any action is needed that it will be to abolish the vacation altogether.

Chrysanthemum in England.
A few people in England were familiar with the chrysanthemum as long ago as 1764. For it was in that year that a certain Philip Miller received one of these plants from Nipm and proceeded to cultivate it at the botanical gardens at Chelsea, London.

Green Shade for the Eyes.
When the eyes are weak a green shade prevents the glare from striking in. Clerical workers, as a rule, use this protection both for shielding the eyes and keeping the muscles of the face in a relaxed condition. The same precaution should be taken by needlewomen.

MANY FEATURES FOR BIG RELAY CARNIVAL

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Champaign, Ill., Feb. 21.—Patriotism in all of its phases will feature the University of Illinois second annual indoor relay carnival which is to be held on Saturday, March 2. Proceeds of the meet will be devoted to the army Y. M. C. A.
In order to insure a profit and to cut down all unnecessary expense, bronze medals will replace the costly watches, pins and medals which have been awarded in former Illinois meets. All point winners will receive the same kind of bronze rewards, while relay teams will also be given the same prizes. For winning schools, silk banners will replace the shields presented hitherto. A loving cup, the gift of Ma-Wao-Da, senior honorary society, will be the trophy for the all-around championship.
As a distinctly patriotic feature, efforts are being made to enter enough relay teams from military and naval encampments to stage one or more races. Several neighboring camps have signified their interest and will be represented provided the time is sufficient for them to train their teams. The length of the races will be left to the teams to decide, as many of the encampments possess athletes who are proficient in one distance while others are strong in different lengths.
A high school relay race will also be added to the list. University high school, Chicago, Oak Park high school, Champaign and several Springfield and Peoria schools have already mailed their entries, while others have signified their intentions of doing so.
The usual events for Western conference, college and all-around teams will also be staged. Conference schools that have already mailed in their entries are Michigan, Wisconsin, Purdue, Chicago, Michigan Agricultural, Ohio State, Indiana, Minnesota and Iowa State. Notre Dame, Millikin and Knox are a few of the smaller colleges that expected to be represented.
As usual, the huge armory, the largest indoor track in the country, will be used for the meet. Covering nearly two blocks in length, the building offers an admirable place to stage a meet on a large scale.

MARVELOUS PICTURES SHOWN FOR BENEFIT

Public Urged to Attend Pictures and Lecture for Benefit of Blind Italian Soldiers.
Charles Upson Clark, who is to lecture at the Myers Theater on Monday evening, March 4th, was unanimously elected president of the Italian Academy of Classical Studies at Rome. This institution was established by a number of American universities and colleges. Our own state university is interested in the institution and members of its faculty have given instruction in the Academy. The faculty is largely made up of professors from American institutions of learning, who are allowed leave of absence for the purpose, and thus enabled to pursue their studies under the most favorable conditions.
The universities also select their favored students for fellowships in the Academy, thus promoting the higher scholarship and preparing men to give instruction in the field of higher learning in American colleges. Our townsman, Philip D. Whitehead, was a fellow from Yale for some three years in the Academy at Rome, and when he returned to the United States he received his degree of doctor of philosophy at Yale and presently an appointment to a minor position in the faculty, which would doubtless have led to better things for him in the future.
Dr. Whitehead is a personal friend of Mr. Clark, and speaks of him in unqualified praise. Mr. Clark is also an acquaintance of Mr. A. Lovelock, brother of his sister, Mrs. Cumberthill of Washington. They speak of him as a lecturer and scholar of great attainments.
Let it be repeated and understood that Mr. Clark has a mission of the highest altruistic character, to obtain funds for the relief of blind and maimed Italian soldiers. The entire net proceeds of this lecture will be devoted to the fund which he is seeking to promote. We have not heard much in Janesville about the work in Italy, but Dr. Clark gives us the opportunity to hear, first hand, information which he can impart, which he has derived from permanent residence in Rome and from his personal observation along the Italian battle front. He presents official pictures and is in the confidence of the Italian government and military authorities and as far as he is authorized to speak he speaks officially.
To be sure, our city is familiar with the Academy at Rome and its work. He knows the country where the war front lies most intimately. He has seen the pictures and these pictures that will be presented, from his personal knowledge of the men concerned and the subject matter upon which the lecture is based.
The Italian Commission visited the United States last summer. Dr. Beccaria was called to Chicago to meet the representatives of his country. He then urged Marconi to have special war pictures prepared and shown in this country so that the American people might be better informed. Marconi said this would be attended to as soon as the commission reached Italy. The first exhibition of such pictures came last fall, and now Prof. Clark is coming along with other official pictures and with the direct sanction of the Italian government. His mission is to enlighten Americans as to the war on the Italian front and at private expense, so that whatever he can earn will be saved for the benefit of soldiers of Italy who have been blinded and otherwise rendered helpless.

According to the terms of the new National agreement the minors will have a voice in deciding their disputes with major league clubs. When cases are heard by the National Commission, the minors will have two judges on the bench to serve with the umpire.

Messrs. Herman, Fener and Johnson. This looks like an important concession, but the fact must not be overlooked that the majors still will control the majority vote. The revised agreement accords a veto to the players, who will be treated in accordance with the terms stipulated three years ago, by the defunct Fraternity.

Amos Strunk, who was recently sold by Connie Mack to the Red Sox, has retired from baseball and will go into business in Philadelphia. In other words, Strunk has joined the holdout brigade. He is trying to squeeze a big salary out of the Boston magnate in spite of the fact that he has been taken out of a tall end club to play with a possible pennant winner. Strunk, like other short-sighted players, doesn't realize that baseball must be operated on lines of economy until the war is over. Frazee isn't worrying.

The National league may try to adopt a new rule relating to double headers. It is understood that more than half of the club owners are opposed to playing off postponed games during the last six weeks of the regular season. If the proposed rule is adopted double headers can be played during the first series in April and May. If a game in April is postponed it can be doubled up with the regular contest the next day, or before that series ends. Advocates of this form insist that too many double headers in August and September mean that the weary players can't enjoy the sport but also provide too much work for the pitchers of contending teams.

Among the first leading twenty hitters in the National league last season were thirteen outfielders.

Another minor league, although had his by the draft enlistment of many of its players, refuses to quit. The Texas league will open the season April 12 and close September 8. Only six clubs will compose the circuit this year. Teams in the cities of Beaumont and Galveston have been abandoned.

News Notes from Movieland

—BY DAISY DEAN—

Doraldina, mentioned as the lady who took New York by storm when she first appeared there in the Hawaiian dances whose craze has spread throughout the country, is to be starred in a Pathe picture, "The Naulakah."

Doraldina.

"The Naulakah" is a screen version of Rudyard Kipling's romance. It will be Doraldina's screen debut. Antonio Moreno will play opposite her.
"The Naulakah" is a story of adventure wherein east meets west in a search for the most famous jewel in the world. To please a woman who is able to further his ambitions, the young American hero (Moreno) travels to India, determined to come back with the Naulakah, and thus begins a series of Arabian night adventures replete with thrills. The settings are all of rare beauty. Doraldina's artistic work in the picture is said to promise her a great popularity on the screen.

Is the personality of the actor that wins your consideration in a motion picture?
Do you prefer an appealing central character rather than a striking dramatic story? Douglas Fairbanks deems that such is the case with most theatre-goers.

"But how can we tell? We're only groping in the dark as yet. We have no precedents to base our standards upon. We cannot tell what will make a good picture, or what the public will like, and with our present system of releasing, we cannot always be sure of getting the best ideas for our work. So far, I think we work about 65 or 70 per cent efficiency. When we reach 75 or 80 per cent, we will be getting pretty good."

Isn't it an amusing contrast of forces that Fairbanks should find his most admired actor that famous Englishman, Forbes Robertson? The one getting the best ideas for our work. So far, I think we work about 65 or 70 per cent efficiency. When we reach 75 or 80 per cent, we will be getting pretty good."

FATTY WITH CHAPLIN
"Fatty" (Roscoe) Arbuckle is to be seen with Charlie Chaplin in the near future, according to wild rumors emanating from the west coast. The little comedian has been looking for a foil since the death of Eric Campbell. It is said, and it will be recalled that Arbuckle set the pace for the bulky man in screen comedy in the old days. Results remain to be seen.

"This pig will be a source of support to me in my old age," said William V. Mong, of Triangles, pointing to a pig.

One of Lee Fohl's problems may be solved by the Salt Lake club. The Salt Lake club has been looking for a foil since the death of Eric Campbell. It is said, and it will be recalled that Arbuckle set the pace for the bulky man in screen comedy in the old days. Results remain to be seen.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a heart working man nineteen years of age, and I do not have much time to fool around with girls. There are girls working at the same place I do who appeal to me as being a lady even though she has to work. I have asked her to go skating with me some Sunday afternoon, and I know that she will do it, because she said she would. I am too good for it, and I want to know what to do.

I will not break this date, but I want to know whether to ask her again. I cannot break this date, as she expects to go. I will wait for her again if you think it unwise. Please tell me what to do.

JORDAN S.

If I were you I would follow my own wishes about the matter and not be influenced by your chum. If you like the girl and she care to go with you, by all means ask her again, unless in your own heart you think she is not worthy of your attentions. The fact that she is a working girl should not be considered.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a fifteen years old, and you asked one of my questions a few days ago. I have a friend who isn't always nice to me and she has my gold pocket watch. Should I just let it go? Whenever I have what she likes she always asks to wear it, and Cheese may be laid or spread on small pieces of bread or crackers and thus carried to the mouth.

Harriet: When you go to a party with another girl, and a boy asks permission to escort you home, if you are polite, you will say, "Yes, I shall be glad to go with you, but I came with Mary Smith, I wonder if someone is taking her home?" The young man should then learn if Mary Smith is provided with an escort, and if not, he should at once include her in his invitation, or see to it that some other boy takes care of her. Mary does walk as far as her home with you and your escort, both you and the young man must make her feel that she is not intruding, but that you are glad to have her with you. If Mary is a considerate, she will insist upon being taken to her home first.

Jesse: It is not proper for you to kiss the young man, goodbye, even when he is going away to war unless you are engaged to marry him; and since you are still so slightly acquainted with him as to call him "Mr. Robert," when you are going to him, you must not address him by his first name when you write to him, unless he asks you to do so.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

A Hint in Economy to those wearing rubber heels on their shoes. When heels become run over go to the shoe repair man and have him remove the heels, putting the rubber heel of the right shoe on the left shoe and vice versa. In this way you will wear twice as much wear out of your rubber heels as you would ordinarily. To Clean Aluminum perfectly, rub with cloth wet with coal oil and covered with fine sand.

When Shirts Become worn at the cuffs and neck cut off neck band, put on a laydown collar, cut length and width of a few cuffs. Both collar and cuffs are of some white material at hand. Then cut waist right length, put hem in bottom and insert rubber, either sew or glue. Place of a buffer in a trunk like newspapers; they are so unyielding that wrinkles and protrusions cannot make their lives felt.

It is useless to try to arrange heavy articles at the bottom of a trunk and the light ones on top—the baggage handlers know no top and no bottom, convenience in handling is all that counts here. Keeping an even, smooth surface for each successive layer one is doing one's best to protect the contents.

CAKES AND COOKIES.

Cheapest Cake—One-half cup each of hot coffee, lard, hot water and cocoa; two cups brown sugar, three cups flour sifted with one teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon soda dissolved in the hot water.

This will make two very large loaves or three small ones. From with powdered sugar wet up with milk and flavor with vanilla.

Molasses Cake—One cup molasses, one-half teaspoon ginger, one cup butter, one cup boiling water, one scant teaspoon soda, flour.

Mix ginger with molasses, pour into boiling water with soda, stir mixed. Add enough flour to make a soft batter. Bake in a moderate oven from twenty-five to thirty minutes. You will have two nice sized cakes.

SIDE TALKS

—BY—
RUTH CAMERON

GETTING DRUNK

How many kinds of intoxication there are besides the customary kind. I have written you before about the intoxication of spending money and surely you have seen in yourself or others the excitement, the exhilaration, the loosening of inhibitions that follows immediately upon the making of some extravagant purchase. Incidentally, the sense of depression and of utility and of self-accusation which often follows such an extravagance carries out the simile only too well.

Then there are, of course, such familiar intoxications as those caused by moonlight or the intimacies of the open fire.

They Never See You As You

But today I was thinking of personalities of the intoxication of personalities. Are there not some certain people who intoxicate you? Contact with them excites and exhilarates you until your inhibitions loosen and you find yourself expanding into quite a different person? You grow wittier and more talkative than is your wont, you laugh more easily, you are yourself surprised at the interesting things you find to say on all sorts of subjects, your memory is stimulated, you grow kinder and larger hearted.

Then You Take a Drop Too Much. If you don't go too far, you are perhaps more charming in your new incarnation. But if you take a drop too much of these over stimulating personalities, it is fatal. You pass into the over talkative stage, you become too witty and too open hearted. You tell things you had no right to tell—and say things you never would have said as your own ears burn when you listen to their echoes in bed at night.

A Dark Brown Taste in One's Heart. You see I speak with feeling. I never had a dark brown taste in my mouth the morning after, but I have had one in my heart.

It is a strange thought that those people never see one as one really is. What a different notion they must have of one from the people who see one stimulated.

I suppose there are phlegmatic people who never pass through such experiences. One does not know whether to envy them or to be sorry for them.

Peppered Cup Cakes—Three cups brown sugar, two eggs, one large spoon lard, one teaspoon each of cinnamon and cloves, scant teaspoon black pepper, one and one-quarter cups either sweet or sour milk, one cup raisins, pinch of salt, three and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon soda added to flour or put into milk if sour milk is used. Bake in cup tins in a moderate oven.

Powdered Sugar Cake—Two eggs, two cups powdered sugar, one cup milk, two cups flour, one-half cup salt, one teaspoon vanilla, four teaspoons baking powder, add stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Bake in three greased layer pans about fifteen minutes in hot oven.

The Daily Novelette

A CLOSE SHAVE.

Lemuel Plumberskuttle sat in the front box of the Gaiety theater, a white orchid in his buttonhole and iniquity in his heart. He scanned the chorus with an appreciative eye. "Gadzooks!" he swore, "That tall blonde on the end is a peachero."

Calling an usher, he detached the white orchid, hastily scrawled a note and sent both behind the scenes. "Meet me in the wings and fly with me," said the note.

When the next beautiful blonde appeared, she wore the orchid and beckoned at Lemuel, whose experienced and sinfully old heart rejoiced. He hurried eagerly to the wings.

"Hello, popsy-wops!" he chuckled, chucking her under the chin.

But the tall blonde drew back hastily, dumping aside her wig and disclosed—oh, splendors!—the features of his wife, Maria Plumberskuttle.

"Viper!" she hissed, "touch me not! Little did you reckon that I had thus disguised myself to prove your villainy. What have you to say?"

Lemuel Plumberskuttle thought quickly and ably.

"Maria," he said, "your words have touched me deeply. Though I will tell you the truth, the whole truth and lots besides the truth. When I saw you dancing on the stage, I said to myself, 'How was my dear Maria, whom I believe to be visiting her mother in Nova Scotia? Each time you appeared I sighed. Ah, that my Maria was only here! I said, 'I will take myself into thinking this blonde is my adorable brunette Maria and take her to supper to complete the illusion.' Now am I wrong?"

Lemuel Plumberskuttle fell upon the glossy shirtbosom of her spouse. "Lemuel," she cried, "all is forgiven. Wait, while I get my coat. I will take supper with you."

Left alone, Lemuel mopped his brow. "Gosh, that was a close shave," he murmured.

LXIV. If a Cowbird pecked a Bunny. What would a Bunny do? Perhaps he'd do a lot of things, if only he could fiew.

You remember in the last story I promised to tell you what Billy Bunny did to the Cowbird if she pecked him. Well, she did, but before the little rabbit had time to wink she flew away, and as rabbits can't fly, the only thing he could do was to shake his candy cane at her and say:

Some day you will be sorry For what you've done to me, For if I ever catch you, I'll hang you to a tree.

After that he looked at his gold watch and chain which good, kind Uncle Lucky had given him, and then he remembered how he had intended two or three stories ago to take the yellow iris flowers to his good, kind uncle and how he had given them instead to Mrs. Tallor Bird.

"Well, that's too bad!" said the little rabbit, "I must find something else to give to my dear Uncle Lucky," so he looked around to see what he could take to him, and right there on the ground was a big diamond pin. His hurry, and a pink pin cushion! Just the thing for dear Uncle Lucky's big red tie!

So the little rabbit picked up the diamond pin and hurried off for Uncle Lucky's house, and when he came to the front gate where his kind uncle was standing talking to a rabbit friend of his, Mr. O'Hare. But

Don't Let Soap Spoil Your Hair

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified coconut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

MANY DEATHS AMONG CIVIL WAR VETERANS

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) Philadelphia, Feb. 21.—Veterans of the civil war are dying at the rate of 100 daily, according to Orlando A. Somers, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. Mr. Somers made this announcement during patriotic exercises in this city in honor of Abraham Lincoln and the Union defenders.

Mr. Somers said there were now living approximately 367,000 veterans, according to the pension office at Washington, and he added that the country would have suffered a great loss after they had all passed away inasmuch as they had been a commanding factor in keeping patriotism alive in this country.

"We now have to send 10,000,000 men across the water before the war-crazed maniac of Europe will admit he is crushed and beaten, but in the end there can be but one outcome—our armies will return victors," Mr. Somers said.

BLUE SKY AND SUNSHINE. To have a tiny home of her own! A room or two in some old-fashioned house, furnished with her own actual possessions—second-hand, but still her own individual belongings! Free from Absolute Independence. Free from little household duties and the responsibility of professional ones. No one to answer to. The blessed sense of seclusion when she wanted it. A life insurance agent—smart kid, too—who makes at least one-third of being cooped up in boarding houses than they'd renounce the privilege of earning their living and—vowing!—Whitney laughed good-naturedly, and patted Claire's hand with a comradely air that said: "Here, here! Don't be solemn and old-fashioned! Awake to the times, and to women's million-fold opportunities in the world!"

Claire responded with a bright smile.

"How much could I save?" she said with eager interest.

"Why—let's see—you can find a couple of dandy little rooms in this neighborhood, for say, $18 a month—live on $4 a week, can't you? That would allow—"

Whitney dragged an old envelope out of his pocket and a pencil and began figuring, with his forehead screwed into an interested frown and his lips caught between his white teeth. Claire leaned forward, fascinated.

"How much more?" she asked. "70 cents a dozen, aren't they? Call it a dozen eggs a week, for your breakfast—that's generous! Now coffee. I know where you can get wonderful coffee for a quarter a pound. Food's ought to last you a week. Sugar and tea ought not be more than another quarter. Bread—say, 35 cents. Potatoes, 14 cents a quart. Oatmeal, three or four cents for a quart. Butter about 25 cents a half pound. A dollar's worth of meat—and there you are! Add it all up and it's only $3.15! Look at your savings! More than $3 a week!"

Claire "looked" at it, hypnotized. The idea took hold of her. The two of them talked for an hour longer. Claire insisted she must go home.

She lay awake most of the night thinking of her dream-hued plans. Did she DARE attempt to carry them out?

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE.

SOAP

Soap and water and vigorous application constitute the most efficient and disinfected we have ever discovered.

Of course, any soap is an alkali, and the normal reaction of the moist or moist of the skin is the alkali. Mildly acid. Alkali tends to irritate a sensitive skin, and excessive use of soap in the bath is accountable for many of the minor skin troubles. The best practice is to rub after bathing. Washing the hands, is, of course, another matter. The hands will endure abuse which the rest of the skin cannot endure.

Soap is probably the best application for excessive oiliness of the skin of the face. But it is important to carefully rinse away all traces of soap after a scrub, rather than warm water, and then with colder water in the succeeding rinses.

Soap, the plain article, is in our opinion an excellent skin medicine. It is a remedy for oiliness of the scalp, oily or dry dandruff.

Spongy water, used to keep a large greasy wet, has been found to be the best antiseptic dressings for wounds, antiseptic but not poisonous as destructive to new cells forming in the healing process.

It is well to be sure to be found that superceded grandma's original soap and sugar police.

Soap is one of the best germicides.

A Simple Way To Remove Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

The morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

Here is Why it is Our Patriotic Duty to Use More Oleomargarine

OUR export of dairy products during 1917 was thirteen times more than the average for the three previous years. And we couldn't ship all that our allies needed at that. Even if our dairying facilities were up to normal—which they were not—these figures mean a shortage here at home of 220,000,000 pounds unless we use something else equally nourishing.

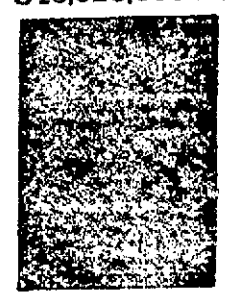

We foresaw the need of alternatives for the food fats we are shipping to our troops and allies and have placed on the market two new food products. By using these products on your table and in your kitchen, you make it easier for those who are fighting our battles on foreign soil.

Vegetable Oil Oleomargarine

Nut margarine was introduced into Europe years ago as a war necessity. It remained because it was well-liked. Nut-ola, a similar product more scientifically made, will do the same here. Let your household be among the first to learn of its merits.

There is no secret about Nut-ola. It is made from the pure oil of coconuts and peanuts, rich, pasteurized milk from dairies under the jurisdiction of the Chicago Board of Health, and selected salt. No artificial preservative used—or peeped in so pure a product.

Here is Why it is Common Sense to Use More Oleomargarine

THE American nation must practice thrift. And where better can we learn than from the farmers in the rich dairying districts of Holland and Denmark? Over there the farmer, knowing its wholesomeness and high food value, uses Oleomargarine on his table and sells his butter.

In Denmark the Oleomargarine consumption is 32 pounds per year for each person. In Holland it is 20 pounds. But over here, where the real need for conservation is equally great, we consume only 2 1/2 pounds per person per year. Use Oleomargarine in your kitchen and on your table, save money and help to win the war.

PETEY DINK—NO WALKING WHEN HE CAN RIDE WITH A QUEEN

Long Live The King

"Well, I mean," said the crown prince reflectively. "We walked a long time, and it was very warm. I have quite a large blister, and the archbishop had to take his shoes off and walk in his stockings, because his feet hurt. No one saw. It was on a country lane. But I'm afraid I didn't do very much good." He drew a long breath.

"No?" Karl inquired.

Suddenly the boy's chin quivered. He was terribly afraid he was going to cry, and took a large sip of tea, which cleared his voice.

"My grandfather is not any better," he said. "Perhaps some one else should have gone. I am not very good," he explained to Karl. "It ought to be a very good person. He is very sick."

"Perhaps," suggested Karl mockingly.

"I hated cooking because whatever I ate gave me sour stomach and a bloated feeling. I drank hot water and olive oil by the gallon. Nothing helped until I tried simple buckhorn bark, ginger, etc., as mixed in 'Zemo.' Because it tastes like lemon, I liked it. I bought a bottle of 'Zemo' and used it as directed. After a few days I felt better. I had no more sour stomach, gas or constipation, and I was able to eat. The INSTANT action is surprising. Sarsaparilla is a disappointment."

ly, with a glance at Hedwig, "they should have sent this 'Nicky' of yours."

Annunciata stirred restlessly. She considered this talk of Nikky in execrable taste.

"He is not particularly good."

"Oh, so he is not particularly good?"

"Well, he thinks he isn't. He says he doesn't find it easy to love his country more than anything in the world, for one thing. And he smokes a great many cigarettes."

"Another taste in common?" jeered Karl, in his smooth, carefully ironic tones.

Annunciata was in the last stages of irritation. There was no mistaking the sneer in Karl's voice. His smile was forced. She guessed that he had heard of Nikky Larsen before, that, indeed, he knew probably more than she did. Just what, she wondered, was there to know? A great deal, if one could judge by Hedwig's face.

"I hope you are working hard at your lessons, Otto," she said, in the severe tone which Otto had learned that most people use when they refer to lessons.

"I'm afraid I'm not doing very well, Tante. But I've learned the 'Gettysburg address.' Shall I say it?"

"Heavens, no!" she protested. She had not the faintest idea what the "Gettysburg address" was. She suspected Mr. Gladstone.

The countess had relapsed into silence. A little back from the family circle, she had watched the whole scene stoically, and knowing Karl as only a woman who loves sincerely and long can know a man, she knew the inner workings of his mind. She saw anger in the very turn of his head and set of his jaw. But she saw more, jealousy, and was herself half mad with it.

She knew him well. She had herself, for years, held him by holding herself dear, by the very difficulty of attaining her. And now this indifferent, white-faced girl, who might be his, indeed, for the taking, but who would offer or promise no love, was rousing him to the instinct of possession by her very indifference. He had told her the truth, that night in the mountain inn. It was Hedwig he wanted. Hedwig herself, her heart, all of her. And if she knew Karl, he would move heaven and earth to get the thing he wanted.

She surveyed the group. How little they knew what was in store for them! She, Olga Loschek, by the lifting of a finger, could turn their smug superiority into tears and despair, could ruin them and send them flying for shelter to the very ends of the earth.

But when she looked at the little crown prince, legs dangling, eating his thin bread and butter as only a hungry small boy can eat, she shivered. By what means must she do all this? By what unspeakable means!

Karl saw the king that evening, a short visit marked by extreme formality, and, on the king's part, by the keen and frank scrutiny of one who is near the end and fears nothing but the final moment. Karl found the meeting depressing and the king's eyes disconcerting.

"It will not be easy going for Otto," said the king, at the end of the short interview. "I should like to feel that his interests will be looked after, not only here, but by you and yours. We have a certain element here that is—troublesome."

And Karl, with Hedwig in his mind, had promised.

"His interests shall be mine, sir," he had said.

He had bent over the bed then, and raised the thin hand to his lips. The interview was over. In the anteroom the king's master of the horse, the chamberlain, and a few other gentlemen stood waiting, talking together in low tones. But the chamberlain, who had gone in with Karl and then returned, stood by a window, with his arms folded over his chest, and waited. He put resolutely out of his mind the face of the dying man on his pillows, and thought only of this thing which he—Mettli—had brought about. There was no yielding in his face or in his heart, no doubt of his course. He saw, instead of the lovers loitering in the place, a new and greater kingdom, anarchy held down by an iron-shod heel, peace and the fruits thereof, until out of very prosperity the people grew fat and content.

He saw a boy king, carefully taught, growing into his responsibilities until, big with the vision of the country's welfare, he should finally ascend the throne. He saw the river filled with ships, carrying merchandise over the world and returning with the wealth of the world. Great buildings, too, lifted their heads on his horizon, a dream city, with order for disorder, and citizens instead of inhabitants.

When at last he stirred and sighed, it was because his old friend, in his bed in the next room, would see nothing of all this, and that he himself could not hope for more than the beginning, before his time came also.

The first large dinner for months was given that night at the palace, to do King Karl all possible honor. The gold service which had been presented to the king by the czar of Russia was used. The anticipatory gloom of the court was laid aside, and jewels brought from vaults were worn for the first time in months. Uniforms of various sorts, but all gorgeous, touched fine shoulders, and came away, bearing white, powdery traces of the meeting. The greenhouses at the summer palace had been sacked for flowers and plants. The corridor from the great salon to the dining hall, always a dreary passage, had suddenly become a fairy path of early spring bloom. Even Annunciata, hung now with ropes of pearls, her hair dressed high for a tarta of diamonds, her canoes exchanged for pearls, looked royal. Proving conclusively that clutter, as to dress, is entirely a matter of taste.

Miss Braithwaite, who had begun recently to think a palace the dreariest place in the world, and the most commonplace, found the preparations rather exciting. Being British she dearly loved the aristocracy, and shrugged her shoulders at any family which took up less than a page in the peerage. She resented deeply the intrusion of the commoner into British politics, and considered Lloyd George an upstart and an interloper.

That evening she took the crown prince to see the preparations for the festivities. The flowers appealed to him, and he asked for and secured a rose, which he held carefully. But the magnificence of the table only faintly impressed him, and when he heard that Nikky would not be present, he lost interest entirely. "Will they wheel my grandfather in in a chair?" he inquired.

"He is too ill," Miss Braithwaite said.

"He'll be rather lonely, when they're all at the party. You don't suppose I could go and sit with him, do you?"

"It will be long after your bedtime."

Bedtime being the one rule which was never under and circumstances broken, he did not persist. To have insisted might have meant five marks off in Miss Braithwaite's book, and his rec-

"There," said Annunciata, "You Look Less Like a Baby."

ard was very good that week. Together the elderly English woman and the boy went back to the school room. The Countess Loschek, who had dressed with a heavy heart, was easily the most beautiful of the women that night. A little court paid tribute to her beauty, and bowed the deeper and flattered the more as she openly scorned and flouted them. She caught once a flicker of admiration in Karl's face, and although her head went high, her heart beat stormily under it.

Hedwig was like a flower that required the sun. Only her sun was happiness. She was in soft white silks, her hair and frock like girl's and unpretentious. Her mother, coming into her dressing room, had eyed her with disfavor.

"You look like a schoolgirl," she said, and had sent for rouge, and with her own royal hands applied it. Hedwig stood silent, and allowed her to have her way without protest. Her hair, submitted, too, to a diamond pin in her hair, and a string of her mother's pearls.

"There," said Annunciata, standing off and surveying her, "you look less like a baby."

She did, indeed! It took Hedwig quite five minutes to wash the rouge off her face, and there was, one night, as well confess, a moment when a part of the crown jewels of the kingdom lay in a corner of the room, whence a trembling maid salvaged them, and examined them for damage.

The Princess Hedwig appeared that evening without rouge, and was the only woman in the room thus unadorned. Also she wore her coming out string of modest pearls and a slightly defiant, somewhat frightened, expression.

The dinner was endless, which was necessary, since nothing was to follow but conversation. There could, under the circumstances, be no dancing. And the talk at the table, through course after course, was somewhat hectic, even under the constraining presence of King Karl. There were two reasons for this: Karl's presence and his purpose—as yet unannounced, but surmised, and even known—and the situation in the city.

That was bad. The papers had been ordered to make no mention of the occurrence of the afternoon, but it was well known. There were many at the table who felt the whole attempt foolhardy, the setting of a match to inflammable material. There were others who resented Karl's presence in Livonia, and all that it implied. And perhaps there were, too, among the guests, one or more who had but recently sat in less august and more awful company.

Beneath all the brilliance and character, the sparkle and gaiety, there was, then, uneasiness, worriedness, and even treachery. And outside the palace, held back by the guards, there still stood, a part of the silent crowd which had watched the arrival of the carriages and automobiles, had craned forward to catch a glimpse of uniform or brilliantly shrouded figure entering the palace, and muttered as it looked.

Dinner was over at last. The party moved back to the salon, a vast and empty place, hung with tapestries and gayly lighted. Here the semblance of gaiety persisted, and Karl, affability itself, spoke a few words to each of the guests. Then it was over. The guests left, the members of the council, each with a wife on his arm, frovies, overdressed women most of them. The council was chosen for ability and not for birth. At last only the suite remained, and constraint vanished.

The family withdrew shortly after to a small salon off the large one. And there, at last, Karl cornered Hedwig and demanded speech.

"Where?" she asked, glancing around the crowded room.

"I shall have to leave that to you," he said. "Unless—there is a balcony."

"But do you think it is necessary?"

"Why not?"

"Because what I have to say does not matter."

"It matters very much to me," he replied gravely.

CHIROPODISTS ASK ARMY APPOINTMENTS

Chiropodists will shortly present to both houses of congress a bill which calls for the establishment of a special corps in the medical department of the army for the care and treatment of the feet of the soldiers.

The solution of podiatry has been rapid and thorough. Many laws regulating the practice of chiropody have been placed upon the statute books of various states until now, twenty commissions have enacted such legislation.

Podiatry is being taught today as a collateral branch of medicine scientifically and thoroughly by seven schools organized for that purpose with the co-operation of medical men.

The scientific aspect of podiatry is of but recent origin, but the growth of this limited branch of medicine along same and safe lines has been prodigious. The modern chiropodist is essentially a scientific man, and is filling a want which for centuries has been neglected.

It is felt that the passage of a law appointing podiatrists to the army will constitute a great boon to our boys in khaki, for those of us in civil life who are incapacitated by foot ills can sympathize with the soldier whose troubles are greater and more frequent than those of the average layman. A pack of sixty pounds on his back, strenuous marches become a nightmare to him whose feet are not sound and are not kept sound.

The average doctor of medicine does not know nor does he pretend to know anything about foot care. He has never taught this branch of medical practice in his student days and never having devoted himself to the treatment of such ills, he is unequipped to deal with them. The army surgeon himself acknowledges the need for this foot service, and congress will probably vote to insure this added step in efficiency for the boys in khaki.

PLANS BEING MADE FOR "DRY" CAMPAIGN

Oshkosh, Feb. 21.—Plans to make Wisconsin a "dry" state in 1918 were laid at the state convention of the Prohibition party here today. The question also whether the Prohibition party favors a union with the Progressive or other parties for the purpose of forming a national party to defeat delegates and alternates to the national convention held in Chicago March 5, are to be decided here today. The proposed union of parties will be decided upon or rejected at the Chicago convention.

Ira Lendrecht is expected to speak here tonight on the temperance question.

Dinner Stories

In one corner of a railway carriage sat a very little girl in charge of a nurse. The mother sat opposite her, behind an illustrated paper. Suddenly there were giggles and peevish cries, and a voice from behind the paper said:

"Give me to her, nurse."

Still the crying went on, and again from behind the paper came the injunction:

"Oh, do let her have it, nurse; it's no use letting the child cry."

Suddenly the cries rose to a howl, and the mother appearing from behind the paper, said indignantly:

"Why don't you do as I tell you, nurse? Let her have it at once."

She's got it, madam. It's a wasp.

At the annual prize day of a certain school the head boy rose to give his oration:

"Friends, Romans and countrymen," he vociferated, "lend me your ears!"

"There," commenced the mother of a Mrs. Biggs' boy. "He wouldn't be his mother's son if he didn't want to borrow something."

"I don't get paid," said Mandy. "I only gets what I collects."

The Daily Gazette, Janesville, Feb. 21, 1878.—A. & F. Sonneborn have been receiving their stock of clothing and cloth for their merchant tailoring department.

Jones and Cavanaugh, for failure to take out the necessary license for running a show, were this morning fined $10 and costs by Justice Patton.

The Mayor says he don't want anything said about it in the paper, so the Gazette will whisper confidentially to its readers, "It's a boy and all doing well."

W. B. Stoddard rises to explain. He says the new corner tipped the beam at ten pounds and a half. Instead of eight pounds as stated in the Gazette, Rev. A. Joyce goes to Bradford next Wednesday night to lecture on "Christianity and Art."

The same gentleman will lecture in All Souls church, next Monday evening on "Christianity in Relation to Amusement."

He is quite a demand as a lecturer, his former efforts having proved very successful. The lecture on "Michael Angelo" by Mrs. Benson of Clinton, was listened to by a small but very appreciative audience, last evening. The lecture presented a very clear and pleasing delineation of the life and struggles and character of the great artist, and the impression made by him in his age, and art in general. Mrs. Benson is a pleasant speaker, and seemed thoroughly conversant with her theme. She is a sister of Mrs. Harvey, wife of the governor, and a lady of fine culture and ability.

TARGET RANGE LIFE ENJOYED BY TROOPS

Camp Grant, Ill., Feb. 21.—Life at the target range at Camp Grant isn't such a bad thing after all according to the different men who stay there both day and night. These men have barracks at the range and live and sleep there. During the day they maintain and operate the range and at night they either study military problems or else pursue the social side of military life at the adjacent village of New Milford.

Lieut. William F. Coleman, in addition to his duties as mustering officer is range officer. He recently relieved Lieut. Col. Harry Brown, who has been detailed to assist at the third officers' training camp. Lieut. Michael R. Killgallon is assistant range officer. He is an efficient officer and has been on the job constantly no matter what the weather. His constant contact with all grades of officers from all parts of the post has made him one of the best known and most popular officers in camp. Lieut. Harry Olin, 344th Infantry, is in charge of the ordnance of the range and is likewise an efficient and thorough officer. In charge of the enlisted men is Sergeant J. Krajowski, Co. C, 341st Infantry, a regular army man who acts as "chief" sergeant. He is nicknamed "Shorty" by the men because of his small stature. But he makes up in good nature for anything that may be lacking in height.

The trainees are in charge of two expert phonicians—former Chicago telephone employees and electricians. They have had a very strenuous time during the summer weather to keep the phones in operation, but were never found missing and there wasn't a day that being held up for lack of communication. The men referred to are Robert C. May and Philip Murphy, Headquarters company 341st Infantry. Murphy, better known on the range as "Spuds," lived at 4318 West 44th avenue, Chicago.

A force of eight men work on targets. As soon as a target is riddled with bullet holes, the men clean off the old targets and apply new paper and so the work can be continued. The men are: William J. (Buck) Short, Co. I, 343d Infantry; 2246 West Erie street, Chicago; S. Jacob, Headquarters Co., 344th Infantry, 4610 Winthrop avenue, Chicago; H. A. (Grandpa) Stokke, Co. C, 331st Machine Gun Battalion, Edgerton, Wis.; Mike E. (Soldier) Lyman, Headquarters Co., 344th Infantry, Chicago; Ernest Erickson, Co. B, 342d Infantry, Bayview, Ill.; Floyd Owens, Co. B, 342d Infantry, Glen, Ill.; Joseph Stinski, Co. I, 341st Infantry, Edgar, Wis.; and Gus (Red Buster) Grambow, Co. C, 341st Infantry, Wisconsin.

The machine gun range is about an acre in size and two men have charge of the target work there. They are Daniel White, Supply Co., 342d Infantry, from the regular army, and Charles Twolin, Headquarters Co., 344th Infantry, Chicago.

The remaining six men of the "target range" are all indispensable. Two of them—D. E. (Slim) Harrison, Machine Gun Co., 341st Infantry, of Wisconsin, and Claude Earl, Co. C, 341st Machine Gun Battalion of Beloit—stand high with all the men and officers of the range. They are the cooks. Sergeant A. Chodora, Co. I, 343d Infantry, is mess sergeant and also ranks high in the estimation of the detachment. Leo Gashnek, 331st Machine Gun Battalion, is the treasurer or "bank skinner." His home is at Cedar City, Wis. J. A. (Carp) Anderson, Headquarters Co., 342d Infantry, of Rockford, is cook, carpenter and a busy man at all times. Last, but not least, of the men responsible for the operation of this important part of the camp is Fred (Speed) McIntosh of the 341st Engineers. McIntosh was a clerk in Chicago and is now clerk at the range.

That the men are enjoying the sports life is evidenced by the fact that none of them have been on the sick report, and all are "strong as oxen," to quote them. Recently they routed the New Milford Audubon and gave a big dance for their friends in that village. It is rumored that some of the New Milford girls are expert candy makers, but who's who is a target range secret as yet undivulged.

Something to Do.

Many children are disagreeable because they haven't enough of the right things to do, such as games and songs that provide activity and stimulate the mind and occupations that answer the child's need to be doing and making something.

"AS REPRESENTED"

It often happens that the beginner in buying purebred stock meets with bitter disappointment. In many cases this is due to the fact that stock is not exactly as represented.

Purebred dairy cows will generally sell for from two to three times the price of grades that are equally good producers. When a man pays from $200 to $250 for a purebred heifer or cow he naturally expects she will produce as much as a grade costing less than half that price.

A representative of the Wisconsin Live Stock Breeders' association recently had occasion to investigate a case in which a man bought a heifer that had feshened once and was nearly dry. He paid something over $200 for her and she was represented as having given from 20 to 25 pounds of milk a day. With her next calf, however, she never gave as much as eight pounds a day. Naturally the buyer was disappointed as he had bought her for foundation stock from which to get a start with purebreds. He wrote the man from whom he made the purchase and in the reply was this statement: "I knew she was not as good as some we had, and that was why I sold her so cheap. If you want to buy any more I would be pleased to do business with you."

The buyer did not get value received, and the article purchased was not as represented. Had it been a piece of machinery or a suit of clothes the firm selling it would undoubtedly have made it good. Why should not the stockman who sells goods guarantee them to be as represented?

Permanent prosperity and success to the breeder of purebred stock can come only when the stock sold are as represented, when the man who buys is satisfied with his purchase. Much of the prejudice against purebred stock has been due to the fact that unscrupulous breeders have sold inferior purebreds for breeding purposes.

The buyer is certainly entitled to get goods as represented when buying stock the same as if he were buying anything else. He is entitled to value received for every purchase.

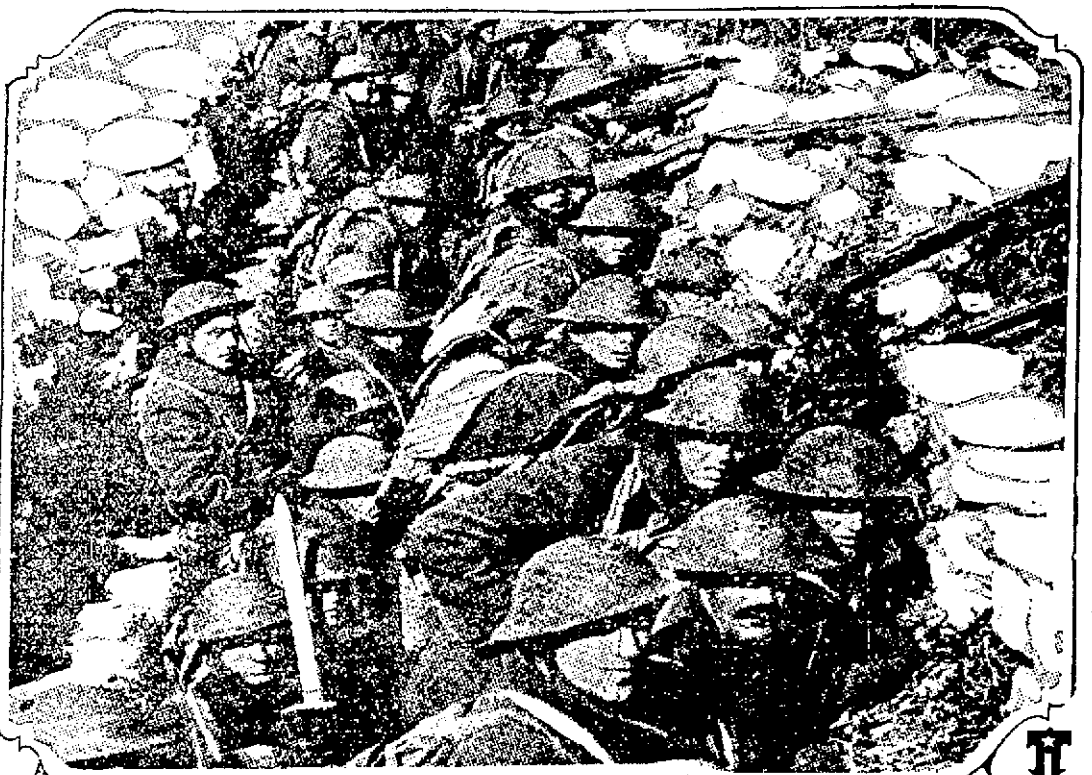

NEW CHIEF OF STAFF WON HIS SPURS BY AGGRESSIVE INITIATIVE, QUICK DECISION AND TENACITY.

Major General Peyton C. March.

Major General Peyton C. March has the distinction of being the youngest major general ever to head the staff of the United States army. He is fifty-three years old and was born in Eaton, Pa., where his father, Dr. Francis A. March, was a professor at Lafayette college. His advances, say his fellow officers, have been won by his aggressive initiative, ready decision and tenacity. He was a football star at West Point, saw active service in the Philippines, where he distinguished himself by the capture of a blockhouse and where he was once given up for drowned, and has a reputation for being able to break his way through red tape.

WHERE THEY ARE AND HOW THEY LOOK THERE— FIRST PHOTOS OF SAMMIES IN FRONT TRENCH

Finally we get a photograph of our boys in the actual work of strafing the Hun in the front line trenches. The wires have brought us word that they were there and from the despatches it is figured they are holding the sector indicated on the map—a part of the front line in Lorraine.

From the photograph it may be deduced that the boys have not a warm spot. The trench coats are all buttoned up tightly at the neck and the rifles on the edge of the trench rest in snow.

But it will soon be warm for the Sammies. And it may be even warmer—and sooner—for the Fritzies in the opposing trenches out across No Man's Land.

Americans who had first brush with the Germans.

When the Germans in a turning movement near Cambrai after General Byng's big drive, ran across a number of American engineers repairing a railroad the Yankees put down tools of construction, took up tools of destruction and gave the Germans a little touch of American fighting in hand-to-hand combat.
